

New Wine New Wineskins: Young Catholic Moral Theologians
2024 Symposium
Call for Paper Proposals
July 25-28, 2024
Holy Cross College, Notre Dame, Indiana

Proposals are invited for papers in moral theology that directly or indirectly engage the Catholic theological tradition and/or the teachings of the Catholic Church. Original research in any area of Catholic moral theology is welcome. Proposals should be 200-300 words and should be submitted through this link: <https://forms.gle/g8WSADDJ6G1kqbSi6>.

The deadline for submissions is January 31, 2024.

Symposium Information: Since 2002, Catholic moral theologians in the early stages of their careers have gathered most summers on the campus of the University of Notre Dame. The purpose of this annual gathering is to foster community and scholarly dialogue, and—most important—to wonder together about the contemporary vocation and intellectual work of moral theologians who seek to engage the Catholic tradition and the teachings of the Catholic Church. Unified by that common concern, those who participate in the annual symposium represent a variety of Christian ecclesial communities, schools of thought, styles of engagement, and areas of interest. Registration for the New Wine New Wineskins symposium is limited to advanced graduate students and junior faculty—i.e., doctoral candidates who have passed their qualifying exams through academics who have not yet been granted tenure.

The 2024 symposium runs from Thursday afternoon (July 25) to Sunday morning (July 28). Every year, we invite an established ‘senior scholar’ whose work has had an important impact within the field of moral theology. We are pleased to announce that Professor Paul J. Wadell will join us this year. After Professor Wadell’s contribution, the remainder of the conference will consist in workshop-style presentations (20 min) and collegial discussion (25 min) of accepted paper proposals. The symposium ends on Sunday with Mass and an informal brunch.

Information about how to register for the symposium will follow. If you have any questions, please contact us at: new.wineskins.ycmt@gmail.com We look forward to receiving your proposals.
